The BBC report says that the UK receives about 21 million scam calls every month, and scammers pretend to be from banks, computer companies, retailers, and even from the government.

Criminals on CCTV: Scammers caught red-handed

Hundreds of thousands of people fall victim to scams in the UK every year.

Many are run from criminal call centres abroad, where teams of me "Jim Browning", icked into a call centre in victims.

Jim gained access to the recorded scam phone calls as well as CCTV footage exposing the scammers at work.

What Jim did was illegal - but he says he wants to stop the fraudsters, and he passed his footage on to BBC Panorama.

How the Covid-19 pandemic created 2 new Malaysian billionaires

By BLOOMBERG - June 16, 2020 @ 10:30pm

IT'S been a good year for glove companies and their founders.

Malaysia, a country that produces about 65 per cent of the world's supply for rubber gloves, now counts at least four billionaires whose fortunes were made in the industry, including two new ones this year alone.

Thai Kim Sim of Supermax Corp was the latest to join the club, with a net worth estimated at about US$1 billion (RM4.2 billion) at the stock high earlier this month, according to the Bloomberg Billionaires Index.

A jump in demand due to the Covid-19 coronavirus outbreak has propelled shares of companies making protective gear, suddenly turning Malaysia into a hotspot for creating ultra-wealthy individuals within the sector.

Top Glove Corp, the world's biggest maker of the product, Hartalega Holdings Bhd and Kossan Rubber Industries Bhd have all benefited. But with a fivefold jump, Supermax's ascent has been particularly notable this year.

"It has become a new norm to wear gloves for various purposes, including medical and retail, and the high usage will benefit their makers in the long term," said Walter Aw, an analyst at CGS-CIMB Research.

"Supermax is a very interesting story. It does its own brand manufacturing, while others are mainly suppliers."

SoftBank-backed Grab cuts 360 jobs on Covid-19 hit

SINGAPORE: Southeast Asian ride-hailing and payments firm Grab said today it would lay off more than 300 employees due to the impact of novel coronavirus, in the latest setback to major backer SoftBank Group.

Southeast Asia's most valuable startup with a valuation of US$14 billion (RM59.8 billion) informed staff of the cuts at a town-hall meeting, according to people with knowledge of the matter.

CEO Anthony Tan told staff in a note which was shared with Reuters the loss-making company would cut just under 5% of its headcount, or about 360 employees. The company had earlier asked employees to take voluntary unpaid leave.

Grab, which is active in eight countries, did not face capital constraints and would be "sunsetting non-core projects, consolidating teams and pivoting to focus on deliveries", a spokeswoman said.

Singapore-based Grab currently has US$3 billion in reserves, according to a source with knowledge of the matter.

The layoffs are the latest restructuring at a SoftBank Group Corp portfolio company.

"The company (Grab) has been in growth mode for so many years in many verticals and it is necessary for it to make an adjustment to be more focused," said Jianggan Li, from Singapore-based tech venture consultancy Momentum Works. "With sufficient capital in the bank account and eased competitive pressure, it should really focus on building the core services well to achieve profitability." – Reuters
